

Brownstone Courtyards, Brooklyn

Currently in construction, the design for this brownstone courtyard began by eradicating invasive Japanese Knotweed plants and will create a new fence, a locally salvaged stone patio, and an understory planting that will compliment several existing oak trees. The client's neighbors both chose to pour concrete over their entire 50' x 20' backyard spaces. We are determined to be an example for a more sustainable and environmentally friendly approach.